 The nominee's participation in the IV Program would lead to a more positive perception of the various facets of the U.S. in the ESTRI community.
 Given his leadership role in the local Arab community, Mostfa's participation in the IV Program would facilitate a less negative opinion of American policies among Arabs in the Rhone-Alpes region, home to one of France's largest Arab communities, a community which is vigorously critical of U.S. policies regarding the Middle-East crisis and the war in Iraq.

 Professor Mostfa is a mid-career scholar of English Studies who is moving into American studies. Until now, he has been a pure British Studies scholar who has had no exposure to U.S. values, civilization, and policies, not even through a brief tourist visit. This lack of exposure is detrimental to his new responsibilities. Beginning in January 2005, he will be in charge of developing and teaching a 45-hour course each year on "political and cultural challenges in the U.S., Australia and Canada." His Dean also plans to assign to him the development and teaching of a course on NGOs that carry out international operations such as Handicap International, World Wildlife Fund, and Amnesty International. Born in Morocco and still very attached to his ethnic origins, Mostfa is an excellent example of an immigrant's successful integration into French academia. In 1990, he was the first intercultural mediator appointed by the French government, and worked for four years interfacing between the Arab community and the French authorities (police, justice, social services and others). Currently, he is the vice-president of COMARA, an association of upper-educated Moroccan expatriates that facilitate intercultural dialogue.

Mostfa is expected to pursue his academic career at the Catholic University of Lyon, and particularly at its International Relations and Translators/Interpreters School (ESTRI), which currently consists of about 400 students who will work in international relations, NGOs, public services and international organizations.

START MEMO NOM-POST-OBJ:

We really do believe that he would be an excellent candidate and that the USG stands to gain a lot from having him participate. As the new director of IEP Lyon (one of the largest and most selective political science institutes in France), he is in constant contact with IEP Lyon's 1000 students and 200 faculty members. As such, he shares his views and perceptions on a variety of subjects -- including the United States -- with them, and an IV program would be a wonderful opportunity for us to influence those perceptions. IEP Lyon is in the process of opening up its curriculum to more international issues, and has just created a professorship devoted to American Studies and Politics. Although Pollet will not be the professor in question, he supervises the position and is responsible for directing and influencing the increased international outlook of the IEP. In terms of the education of hundreds of French students, it would be of great benefit to us to have someone in that position who has a positive view of the United States. Pollet, by the way, is not "only" the director of IEP Lyon -- he also teaches comparative politics there at the doctoral level. Again, participating in the IV program would benefit us by ensuring that what he is teaching about American politics is correct and positive.

In addition to his duties at IEP Lyon, Pollet also serves as an associate researcher with numerous scientific institutions and is a productive writer on a number of topics -- as such, it would be of great benefit to us if his perceptions of the United States were accurate, informed, and (of course) positive. The IV program would be an excellent way of arriving at that goal.

END MEMO NOM-POST-OBJ:

START MEMO NOM-POST-RCMD:

Pollet's main fields of interest would include the following:
Government: The legislative and the federal government; policy formulation; citizen' participation Analysis of public policies: federal and state agencies, think-tanks (Rand, Heritage Foundation, Pew research), urban development institutions Welfare system: Medicare, pension funds, social work institutions Local governments and leadership: Lobbying organizations, state governments, media, community groups American Studies Association

START MEMO NOMINATING-JUSTIFICATION:

Gilles Pollet is a dynamic political science scholar who recently was elected director of the Institute of Political Science of Lyon, one of the largest and most selective political science institutes in France. Throughout his career and in parallel with his teaching activities, Pollet has had an impressive list of concurrent positions. In 2001, he was elected President of the National Association of Political Science Scholars and Researchers. In 2003, the Ministry of Research and New Technologies tasked Pollet with the restructuring of upper education in the field of social sciences. In addition, Pollet continues to teach and is the director of the IEP's doctoral program on Public Policies and Comparative Systems of Government. He is also an associate researcher with numerous scientific institutions. Pollet is likely to pursue his academic career for another twenty years and to remain a very productive writer. In view of the crisis that affects the French retirement system, his expertise in comparative retirement systems should make him an increasingly sought-after expert.

Pollet's knowledge of the U.S. is extensive but purely theoretical. His participation in the IVP would have a positive impact on his own perception of U.S. values, democracy, social environment and system of government. Because of his involvement in a wide variety of activities, Pollet would be able to share any insights gained during the IVP not only with the 1,000 students and 200 scholars of the IEP, but also with a large number of influential circles. Moreover, the IEP is largely opening its curriculum towards international relations, and is, for the first time creating a professor position that is exclusively devoted to American studies.

Ramel's main field of specialization (international relations, conflict ethics, and war sociology) ties in to various facets of the MPP. The ultimate goal of this International Visitor's program would be to help reduce the perceptual differences between French and American public opinions about security, warfare, and regional stability. A first objective would be to highlight the U.S.' attachment to moral values and expose the visitor to the work conducted by ethics development organizations, including in the American military. A second objective would be to facilitate the establishment of a transatlantic dialogue among ethics experts and political philosophers.

Frederic Ramel is a young assistant professor of political science who specializes his research and teaching on contemporary conflicts and their impact on public opinions and international alliances. Currently working on the consequences of 9/11 and the war in Iraq, he is focusing his research on how diverging cultural perceptions of the enemy can lead to the fragmentation of an international order or an alliance.
Ramel has already been a productive author. His courses reach an annual audience of some 2,000 students in Lyon-III University's School of Law and Political Science.
Expected to teach for another 35 years or so, Ramel has the profile to follow a long-term academic career, eventually reaching the ultimate rank of director of research. In parallel with his teaching responsibilities, he will probably continue to conduct research for the Lyon-based Center for Defense and Security Studies --one of the rare French think tanks exclusively devoted to security issues.
